Fishes as Practical Johers A Human Hog-An Interesting Sight at the Fish Commission How Real Estate Values Have Increased.

Fishes are not ordinarily supposed to be gifted with any great amount of Intelligence, but an incident which occurred in a Washington home a few days ago proves that they have a keen a long list of vice-presidents was ansense of humor and are fond of practical joking. One of the young women of the house in question has for pers a boby mud turtle and severat gold tishes." The turtle is frequently placed in the same tank with the fish. The other day he lay floating on the surface of the water asleep, and with his four feet sticking out.

The goldfish saw in this a The goldish saw in this a good chance to play a trick on Mr. Turus, and after putting their heads together a few minutes they divided into four groups and seizing his feet in their mouths dragged him to the bottom of the tank. When awakened by his sud-den immersion, he had considerable difficulty in shaking himself free from his tormenters. There cannot be the slightest doubt that the fishes had some means of communicating their ideas to each other, for it was plain to those who observed the incident that the trick was the result of preconcerted action.

An amusing specimen of human hoggishness was witnessed the other day in a well-known Seventh-street icecream saloon. A young man, who from the style of his clothes and the verdancy of his manner was evidently from the country, walked in, hand-inhand with a young woman who had an equally rustic appearance. Both sat down at one of the tables and the young man ordered one dish of ice-cream. It was for the girl, of course, one would naturally suppose. Not a bit of it, however. The young man calmly ate it bimself, apparently with great relish, planked down the price on the table and remarked: "Gosh, but that's good; why don't you buy yourself some, too, Sal?" "Sal" said something about its costing too much, and out they walked

"It is a crying shame and a disgrace a new Police Court building, or decent quarters hired for it somewhere." remarked a well-known lawyer. "If any private individual or corporation were to attempt to transact their business is such a place as the present Police Court they would be arrested for maintaining a misance. Many people who should be punished for various offenses against the law are permitted to go free, simply because decent people will not go into such a dirty mal-oderous hole as the old building at the corner of Sixth street and Louisiana avenue, in order to prosecute them. It is positively dangerous to stay in it for any length of time, and I always have great hesitation in acceptia case which necessitates my pro ce there.'

The interesting process of hatching the eggs of land-locked salmon by the hundreds of thousands can be witnessed any day at the central station of the Fish Commission in the old Armory building, corner of Sixth street and Maine avenue southwest. The eggs of the salmon are about the size of a pea. They are of a transparent, pinkish hue, and the wee fishes inside can be plainly seen wriggling about in their efforts to escape from their little prison cells. As soon as released the fishes are drawn through a syphon and tube in the hatching jar to a tank, where they can sport about until large enough for ship-ment on the Fish Commission cars to the points where they are destined to stock land-locked lakes or large ponds. Thousands of these fishes will be shipped during the next few weeks. meantime numbers of visitors call daily at the station to witness their hatching out. Another interesting feature of the station are the experiments being made with thousands of the common yellow perch, natives of the Potomac River. These fishes are hardy and form a valnable portion of the small or fry-fish supply of this city.

It is wonderful how the value of property has increased in the central portion of the city, especially in the loealfty of Tenth and Eleventh, F and G streets. St. Vincent's Orphan Asylum at Tenth and G streets, opposite St. Patrick's Church, was built years ago, when ground and building material were cheap. The lot, which is a spacious one, runs back to I eventh and G streets. It is one of the most desirable sites for the building of business houses in the city. It is learned from a reliable source that $300,000 has been offered and refused for the property.

Bishop Newman, who was General Grant's pastor at the Metropolitan Methodist Episcopal Church, wants, with other professorships at the proposed National Methodist University in this city, a chair for journalism; for, says the good Bishop, "journalism is a profession as honorable as that of law, medicine and theology."

Our Own Contennial. A meeting was held last night by the centennial committee of the Washington Board of Trade to consider steps for celebrating the centennial and the location of the permanent seat of gov-ernment here. No final action was taken. The centennial of the laying of the corner stone of the District, April 15, 1891, is to be the day celebrated.

The confirmation of J. B. Eaves as collector of the Fifth district of North Carolina has been laid over by the Finance Committee on a complaint of Charles Price. Price has been for some years and is now engaged as an attorney by the Rich-mond and Danville Railroad Company. It is said that he never voted the Republican ticket and is employed by a railroad Demo-eratic syndicate to light the confirmation for political designs.

SON ITS WINDING WAY."

Slow Progress of the Monster Spool of Steel Wire,

The great spool of cable for the Seventh-street branch of the Washington and Georgetown Street Rallway is that an appropriation is not made for proceeding slowly "on its winding way" down Four-and-a-half street southwest towards its destination on the river front.

The railroad tracks at the intersection of Virginia avenue were crossed without accident, but owing to delays and other causes the spool will hardly reach the power house until some time to-morrow.

Great crowds still line the sidewalks watching the tedious process of moving the cable. A force of painters have been put to work on the power house, and it is predicted that it will be ready for occupancy in less than three weeks. Several of the new cable cars for the Seventh street line, drawn by horses, were run over the road this afternoon. They are commodious and quite pretty, being painted a combination of orange and lemon color. The new cars at tracted general attention along the thoroughfare over which they were run. MURDER AND MANSLAUGHTER.

threw his pursuers off the track, as-sumed some apt disguise, met the Sheriff's posse, delighted them with songs and stories, stayed with them at a little village on the Sacramento, in the only hotel the place afforded, and, heds being scarce, slept with the Sheriff. During the night he arose, slipped out of the room and drove a knife into the door post, so as to hold the Sheriff im-prisoned in case he awoke. A few minutes later he was mounted on the best horse in the Sheriff's party, and was leading two others. The rest he drove to the river and into the willows

The following incident was told by one of the principal actors. It happened one August some twenty-five years ago: A young German had spent most of his money for a fine horse and riding outfit, and started from Sacramento to ride to Portland, Ore. He was in Northern Shasta when his horse began to go lame, and in an hour could hardly put one foot before another. The German was young, excessively ignorant about horseflesh, and had a not unwar-ranted impression that most people managed sooner or later to swindle him. So when his horse went lame be began to feel that the honest old farmer of whom the purchase was made had sold him a worthless animal. He had invested $150 in the creature, and now, perhaps, it was not worth $20.

About this time a benovolent old mountaineer came along and the German appealed to him about "dot horse." The old mountaineer was one of the shrewdest of horse traders, and after a long examination he pronounced it a severe case of founder.
"No good, that norse, for a year.
Turn him out to pasture. And he won't be the same horse ag'in, even "What shall I do?" cried the tender-

After a long talk the trader offered the German $30 for the horse, saying that with care he could make him worth $50, but that a foundered horse was practically worthless, except for a little farm work.

The ignorant German consented, took the money, handed over the horse, took his saddle and started to walk to the nearest stage station. The sharper waited until his dupe was out of sight. Then he took a pair of blacksmith's pincers from his saddle bags, and in five minutes had wrenched off all four of the new steel shoes from the horse's hoofs. In half an hour the animal began to walk easily.

"Thar, I thought so," he muttered.
"Tight shod by some valley fool of a blacksmith, that's all. Lord, I wish I could find such a durn fool every day. The German walked along for several surs, more and more suspicious about his late friend, and slowly discovering that even a lame horse was better than no horse at all. Suddenly a man rode out of the bushes and demanded where in the devil was his horse. He told his story briefly and mourn fully, more than ever certain that it had two sides. The man listened attentively, broke into fits of laughter, sitting side-wise on his great brown horse and pulling at his black moustache. He began to ask questions. When was the horse shod last, and where? Then he asked more questions about the aged and benevolent stranger. Finally he said: "You've been swindled. This is my heat, so I suppose I must help you out. You walk up the creek till you come to a camp. There's bread and dried to a camp. There's bread and dried beef. Then you lie down and go to sleep. Some time within the next six hours Sheet Iron Jack overhauled the new owner of the horse and leveled a pistol at his head

"You made a mistake a little while ago, Philips." (For he knew the old mountaineer very well.) "You obtained my German friend's horse on false pretenses—you pseudologized about it. Now climb down and climb on your own plug."
Phillips looked at the pistol, then at the horse, then at his own pistol. "Don't be a fool, old man." "But I oughter have back that $30 I aid that infernal Dutchman." "My honest friend, that goes for my lawyer fees.'

Phillips lost his temper and swore roundly, but it was a foolish proceed-ing, for Jack replied calmly: "After all, lawyers take all there is to be had; turn out your pockets, you old horse doctor!" And he took $600 from the trembling and conquered sharper, surveyed him a minute, tossed him back half of it and rode back The young German was roused after a while by Jack's return. "Here's your horse and outfit," he said. "I've put some dried meat in your saddle-bag and here's a pistol. If another black smith langes your horse pull on him.

That's a good horse. Don't you come back this way or I shall probably take it myseif. And don't you tell about this or you'll be laughed at. The $30? tain't mine: I've got my own fees out of the case. Good by!"

Down on Art.

New York World. The Treasury Department has decreed that ornamental baskets in which champagne is imported shall be assessed at the rate of 100 per cent, ad valorem. Baskets not ornamental do not meet with any such treatment. The antag-onism of the high tariff system to art in any form is really painful. Why a basket pleasing to the eye should be heavily taxed while a wicker receptacle bearing no decorations is allowed to pass the custom house without much difficulty is one of those peculiar problems which prove the absurdity of certain features of protection.

Sheet-Iron Jack, years ago, became known as the most expert horse thief in this region. On one occasion he had a present to be found in the factor of the wastler in advertible to the wastler in it die in a few hours. The water is clear limestone, with a peculiar taste, which makes it unpalatable to man or beast. Horses and cows will not drink it, no matter how thirsty they may be. Deep down below the surface of the lake may be seen what appears to be the charred and blackened trunks of large taste. They stand and to the water. trees. They stand upright in the water, but have neither root nor branch and never rise to the surface or sink to the bottom. The lake has no outlet, and the volume of water in it is the same all the time. A strange fatality attaches to this lake. Once it was the favorite resort of the boys of the neighborhood for bathing and swimming, but now they never go near it. Fifteen boys have been drowned in its waters in twice as many years. A few of the bodies have been recovered, but those who were drowned any distance from the banks sank to the bottom and were never brought to the surface.

The depth of the lake has never been ascertained. Soundings to the depth of 700 feet found no bottom, and the people in the vicinity say the lake has none. The Indian legend of the origin of the lake is that before the white man came to this country two tribes became involved in a war, and after a number of bloody battles the smaller tribe was almost exterminated. Then the old men and chiefs of the weak tribe sued for peace and arranged for a council. While the pipe was being pas a signal was given and the chiefs of the strong tribe suddenly sprang up with drawn tomahawks and murdered every one of the chiefs of the smaller

Then the war was renewed and carried on until the weak tribe was extirminated. A few moons after the massacre of the chiefs a fire broke out in the pine forest where the massacre oc The fire burned on this spot for eight moons and the ground sank down out of sight, the fire disappeared, and in its stead appeared the lake. The Indians gave the lake a name which means "lake of death."

NOISELESS POWDER NOT NEW,

It Was Known a Hundred and Fifty Years Ago, . From the New York Star. I was speaking to an Army officer of the modern improvements in the weapons of war, and among other things alluded to the noiseless powder just invented. "There is nothing new about he said, "if we are to believe the New York Gazette of 150 years ago. And the gentleman, who is somewhat of an antiquarian, produced an old scrap-book containing the following, cut from that paper dated March 4. 1734:

"Lately imported, a choice parcel of swords. The blades are old, but the handles are of the newest fashion. They may be worn indifferently by men, women and children without hurting themselves or any other person.

The blades, being placed in a certain mathematical position, have contracted such extraordinary virtue that they will ever prevent the person who wears them from being poisoned. They have many other good qualities, as may ap-pear from afti—taken before—(sic). They may be had very reasonably at several smiths and other shops.

"N. B.—At the same places may had the best sort of Italian pocket pis tols, with new-invented powder, which will do a great deal of mischief at a distance without any report."
